AIVCE-BS-2, 2020ShahAlam: Keynote Speaker

Lobna A. Mostafa

Is an Associate Professor of Urban and Community Design in Faculty of Fine Arts, Menia University Egypt and works currently as the Vice-Dean of College of Architectural Engineering and Digital Design, Dar Al-Uloom University, Riyadh, KSA, where she is also the director of Center of Consultancy, Training and Studies.

She received her Ph.D. degree in 2010 from Cairo University, Egypt, titled "Management of the Urban Development from the Perspective of E-Government". She received her master's degree in architecture in 2001 from Cairo University, titled "Upgrading of Urban Heritage Zones- Documentation and Evaluation of the Conservation Practices in Arab Countries".

She has profound teaching, research and consultancy experience in Urban Design and Urban control. She has been into the academia for the past 25 years. Throughout this time, she was recognized for applying best teaching skills and received the Queen Effat excellence in teaching award in 2018. She believes that the best quality to deliver to her students is to inspire them to become the architects who could facilitate their community well-being and enhance their cities. She also received the Golden Medal of Recognition from Ministry of Scientific Research in Egypt for the urban and architectural designs of the first Science and Technology Park STP, City of Scientific Research and Technological Applications (SRTA), Borg el Arab, Egypt, April, in 2015. She is a co-founder and a member of the steering committee of AMAKEN Place-Making network for Arab World, a part of PlacemakingX world network, with a special focus on placemaking, public spaces design and Environment- Behaviour studies in Arab countries.

Her research work varied between heritage management, sustainable and knowledge-based urban development. However, her principal research interest focus on Urban Sociology and Environment-Behaviour Studies. She has conducted research and published journal articles in environmental behaviors studies, post-revolution, and urban sociology. Her current research and consultancy works include community inclusion (such as social resiliency & urban- social engagement), and post-crisis management and working currently in an action research project involving university students to participate in investigating community-urban responses post-pandemic COVID19 case.

She also serves as Editorial Member of the Asian Journal of Environment-Behaviour Studies, and Journal of ASIAN Behavioural Studies, and an active reviewer for the Journal of Public Space, Journal of Heritage Conservation. In addition, she published her first book "Management of Urban Development Policies using tools of E-Government" in 2017, ISBN-13: 978-3-330-85436-9, ISBN-10: 3330854367.
